

James Tobin: Director

James joined the Board during 2007 and serves as the Land Conservancy's Chief Steward and Chairman of the Stewardship Committee. A native of Ridgefield, he has always had a keen interest in the outdoors and enjoys both hunting and fishing. His strong interest in conservation and the commitment he has displayed throughout the years in protecting the Town's open space was recognized by the Town of Ridgefield when he was awarded the Edith Meffley Award in 2013, a distinction only a handful of Ridgefield residents have received for their contributions related to conservation.

Jim has a deep knowledge of Ridgefield's history and often enlightens Board members about the people and circumstances pertaining to their land donations to the LC.

Jim owns a heating and plumbing business. He is a graduate of Ridgefield High School.
